REPORT OF THE SCHOOL BOARD.

Number scholars as reported by selectmen, 139 : boys, 66, girls, 73 : whole number different pupils which have attended school, 163. The town owns school books, viz : 202 readers, 106 spellers, 108 geographies, 169 arithmetics, 76 grammars, 42 histories, 20 physiologies, 15 bookkeeping books, 2 ancient histories, 1 physical geography, 10 dictionaries.

There have been three terms of ten weeks each, the only exception being on account of sickness. It is very desirable that this number be maintained the coming year, and we believe an appropriation of thirteen hundred dollars will meet the requirements.

The school year has been marked by steady progress, and in some instances our hopes have been more than realized. Continued experience under the free text book law commends it as a measure of wisdom and beneficence, placing all pupils more nearly upon an equality than was possible without it, while the aggregate cost is less, because of reduced rates on larger orders.

While most of our school houses fairly represent the interest taken in our public schools, we are forced to say that those in Nos. 7 and 8 are not all we could wish. Some repairs are needed upon the former, and the latter is decidedly unfit for winter use. Believing that the school rooms should be made pleasant and attractive, and that the surroundings should be beautified in all practical ways, we suggest that arbor day of each year be devoted to that purpose, and that parents and others unite with teacher and pupils in planting trees and flowers about the school yards, removing unsightly obstacles and grading the grounds. A few schools made a beginning last year and manifested much enthusiasm in the work. A nice bed of flowers would prove an educator, and tend to promote that refinement and love of the beautiful, without which no life is complete.

An effort has been made to encourage singing, as it gives pleasing and helpful variety to the exercises. Music should form a part of the education of every child, and we hope a united effort will be made the coming year to introduce it in every school.

Any tendency to limit the number of years spent in school is to be regretted. There is no good reason why a scholar may not attend till twenty years of age, or longer, if he desires. It was common years ago, why not now? Many pupils leave at an age when the mind is best fitted for effective mental work, and thus miss opportunities which they will often regret, but can never retrieve. We appeal to the young people of Alstead to continue their school life as long as possible. It is honorable. You will become better men and women by remaining boys and girls a little longer. Teachers will be employed who are competent to give older scholars opportunities for advanced study, thus bringing to their homes some of the advantages of the academy, and preparing those who desire a more complete course for the duties before them. The watchword should be, better schools and a higher education for all.

An amendatory act increasing the time of compulsory attendance would in some instances be beneficial.

Teachers, your work is not simply an occupation by which to gain a livelihood, but a profession carrying with it great responsibility and requiring professional training and constant study of the best educational methods. The time is probably not far distant when normal training will be required. Why should not teachers as well as ministers, lawyers and doctors fit themselves for their profession by special preparatory work?

The coming generation will be one of broader thought and culture, and we should help to prepare our young people for the demands of that time by continuing the present liberal policy of the town in support of public instruction, by united effort in securing still better results from the means used, encouraging constant attendance, promptness, obedience, studiousness, and a love and appreciation of all school duties and privileges.

If any person needs breadth of thought and a keenly trained mind it is the teacher. They should also possess a wide range of information and be constant students, prompt, persevering, energetic. There is no excuse for droning delay in school room exercises. Let the teacher be quick to act and the pupils will soon learn to follow her example. Upon her skilful management largely depends the work we have mentioned.

Text-books should be used to guide not to support. Should furnish themes for thought quite as much as material for memory. Children should be taught to think and judge for themselves. Better a well-disciplined mind than an overloaded memory. This work wisely directed by the teacher will promote good judgment, thoughtfulness and self-reliance.
